

FNINR Hosts Capitol Hill Briefing to Highlight Critical Nursing Research

The Friends of the National Institute of Nursing Research (FNINR) recently held an educational briefing on Capitol Hill. The presentation entitled "The Power and Impact of Nursing Science," captured the essence of research in three critical areas - Traumatic Brain Injuries, Improving Care and Quality of Life for Dementia, and Building a National Network Palliative Care.
